STOCKS NEWS EUROPE-UK small caps edge higher

The FTSE Small Cap index firms 0.1 percent, mirroring strength from the blue chips, while junior-listed AIM shares drop 0.1 percent.

China-based healthcare and consumer products group Hutchison China Meditech is a good gainer on the AIM index, up 5.7 percent, after it accompanies its first-half results, which point to continued strong growth, with a positive outlook.

Chip designer Wolfson Microelectronics is among the top fallers on the FTSE Small Cap index, off 4 percent, as it posts a 13 percent rise in second-quarter revenue, towards the bottom of its guidance, after Galaxy S4 smartphone sales by its customer Samsung were not as strong as some expected.
